

BACKGROUND

Neurovascular diseases have become serious medical problems and usually result in poor prognosis and disability. Stroke, for example, the most common neuro vascular pathology, has been associated to high mortality and the third most common cause of death after coronary disease and cancers (WHO, 2007). The prevalence of stroke is 12.1 per 1000 population in Indonesia (The Ministry of Health of Indonesia, 2013). This is higher than the average incidence of stroke in Asia

Early diagnose will significantly result in a better outcome of stroke management, which in turn will decrease mortality and disability. Proper diagnostic imaging method plays a significant role in early diagnose of stroke. Cerebral angiography, for example, firstly developed in 1927, is still being used, even though other advanced imaging modalities such as CT Scan and MRI have been proven to be clinically effective and non-invasive

Considering the importance of this topic, the 5th Southeast Asian Radiographers and Radiological Technologists Conference (SEARC) and the 6th Scientific Meeting of Indonesian Society of Radiographers, held on 18-20 October 2018, will focus on neuro vascular imaging and therapy, with all of its aspect, including imaging modalities, interventional techniques, radiation therapy and radiation protection. This conference will be held in Bali (Indonesia), the paradise island. The beauty and local culture of this island will add interesting values to this international event. Conducting the theme of “Collaboration Towards Excellence”, we would like to officially invite you to join this prestigious event, through which we can share our knowledge and experience, and initiate excellent collaboration amongst professionals across countries towards a better outcome of neurovascular disease management
